PARIS GASTRONOMY

French cuisine was declared part of the world's intangible cultural heritage by Unesco in 2010, and Paris is the capital of the 'gastronomic meal of the French'. The city has many Michelin-starred chefs. New restaurants open every month, with a new takeaway concept or fine food store cropping up in one district or other practically on a daily basis.

Paris is a hotbed of contemporary, creative cuisine - an ethos inspired by Le Fooding®, the now-famous culinary movement that started in 2000. There are multiple food trends, from street food to single-dish restaurants. Eat out in a food store, watch chefs at work, sample an intriguing set menu, or learn to cook alongside a Michelin-starred chef: there are any number of ways to indulge your love of food and please your palate in Paris. Follow the guide!

NEW PLACES AND TRENDS

> In the news: canteens and upscale fast food

2017 saw the arrival of new restaurants, gourmet food counters and inspired chefs crafting mouth-watering recipes using seasonal ingredients. Pick and choose among the dazzling array of flavours on offer at these brand-new places.

> The new craze: eating from a bowl

The single-dish 'meal in a bowl' - an attractively presented, tasty recipe made from fresh produce - is catching on fast in Paris. Colourful, retro Buddha bowls now feature prominently on the menu at restaurants serving healthy, morale-boosting meals. What's more, vegan bowls are becoming increasingly common.

>The latest hipster trend: Coffee

The fragrance of good coffee has wafted through the French capital ever since new-style coffee shops with a welcoming atmosphere began opening a few years ago. Most of them serve quick, healthy snacks like avocado toast topped with sprouted grains and chia seed pudding to enjoy as you breathe in the aroma of freshly roasted coffee (of different origins). They source their beans from the best craft roasters in Paris: Belleville, Lanni, Gobelins, Varenne, Ternes, Café Lomi, Véronica Artisan Torréfacteur and Sommelier du café. Serving artisan roasted espresso, filter and cappuccino, plus a whole range of gourmet coffees to sample with guidance from baristas, these places boasting all the latest equipment are havens for coffee enthusiasts. Solicitous service and personalized roasting workshops add to their appeal. Latte art - decorating the foam on top of an espresso - is an increasingly popular trend. What could be a nicer way to start the day than sipping a little heart?

Markets and shops for a meal on the go

Paris food markets are a paradise for gourmets. There is at least one market in every arrondissement. Paris is also rich in department-store food halls and fine food stores. The renowned Grande Epicerie de Paris - the food emporium of the Bon Marché department store - has just opened a new branch on the Right Bank, in Rue de Passy. From a maturation chiller filled with flavourful dry-aged cuts to a 'library' of chocolates from around the world, not to mention the freshest produce and a dazzling array of international foods, this is the ultimate foodie haven. Le Printemps du Goût, another new food space, is located on the top two floors of the Printemps menswear store. Displaying a tempting range of fine food and seasonal produce, it also gives four of the hottest new chefs in town free rein to indulge their creativity. Pull up a chair to one of the tables dotted around the space and tuck in! Tables in grocery stores, shop areas in restaurants, improvised counters in food markets, tasting areas in shops, clubs or art galleries: the trend is for breaking down frontiers and blurring genres; for restaurants designed as lifestyle venues, and especially a fad for concept establishments.

Grocery stores with a few tables where you can wind up your shopping spree with a light meal are very popular right now. At Claus, there are great breakfast products to buy and taste on the premises. Causses has some of the best gourmet products, from charcuterie to dairy products, as well as fruit and vegetables; small tables d'hôtes enable customers to enjoy a snack while doing their shopping. The newly revamped Galleries Lafayette Maison & Gourmet, which moved to new premises at the end of 2014, houses 14 eateries serving freshly-prepared food. Merci, the fashion, home decor and design shop, has an organic-vegetable canteen on the ground floor, and its own bar. At Maison Plisson, you can opt to enjoy a beautifully presented light lunch on-site or have it packed to take home.

> The Fooding® ethos

Fooding® was launched at the instigation of Nova magazine in 2000. The word is a contraction of 'food' and 'feeling', and the movement was created to give a modern spin to a food tradition that was resting on the laurels of its Michelin-starred cuisine. The secret of its success: a focus on promoting creative and trendy cooking brimming with surprises and new twists. Events like Fooding® Week and the Grand Summer Fooding® are organized throughout the capital to familiarize the public with this innovative approach to cooking. Plus, every year, the Fooding® bureau publishes a guide featuring restaurants around the world to enable people to discover new culinary talents and daring gourmet initiatives. The guide slots restaurants into a variety of categories such as 'So good!', 'Feel good', 'Hurt me!' and 'Late night hunger'. Every year, there is a list of prize-winners in each category. Fooding® turns 18 this year. The movement has remained faithful to its original mission statement: 'Cultivating an appetite for change; rejecting boredom; embracing the beautifully ordinary, and espousing current-day eating trends.' Tasting the food of today and avoiding feuds about food: that was the original free-thinking credo which inspired the famous collective, and it is still their driving force 18 years on.

> Paris turns 'Omnivore'

For more than 12 years, the Omnivore Food Festival has unveiled the creativity of a young generation of cooks from all backgrounds. Since 2012, the event has taken on a new global dimension, becoming a travelling cooking festival called the 'Omnivore World Tour Paris Food Festival'. During the year, 12 major cities, including Paris, play host to the caravan-big top, chefs' master classes (sweet and savoury food), and gourmet food and wine tasting evening functions.

The bistro revival

The term 'bistronomy' (a contraction of 'bistrot' and 'gastronomy') was coined back in the 90s to describe affordable restaurants (menus at around €30) with a small team of staff, modest premises, an informal vibe and inventive cooking. The concept has evolved over the years and become increasingly popular.

PARIS GASTRONOMY

Blending a restaurant ethos and communal dining, these places have friendly service, a chalkboard menu of seasonal dishes, creative young cooks and, as often as not, fusion food mixing French and Asian influences. The secret of their success is simple: everything tastes good!

THEMED RESTAURANTS IN PARIS

Paris has restaurants catering to foodies of all stripes: fans of one specific food item, ethical eaters, vegetarians and meat lovers.

> Single-dish restaurants

Narrow-focus restaurants for fans (of crab, caviar, truffles, eggs, roast chicken and so on), and food bars serving a single dish: quenelles, soup, oysters, blinis or mozzarella. Pure delight if you can't get enough of your favourite food.

> Dry-aged meat

Despite the spread and popularity of vegetarian cuisine in Paris in the past few years, red meat has made a big comeback. Ribeye steaks that have been dry-aged for several weeks to develop flavour are the latest craze. Whether it's eaten at Argentinean canteens, American-style steakhouses or restaurants with a grill, fireplace or charcoal oven where customers can watch their food being cooked, meat is definitely flavour of the month.

AN AFTERNOON SNACK

With any number of cosy and/or chic tea rooms, not to mention chocolatiers and pastry shops, Paris is a paradise for those with a sweet tooth!

> For chocoholics

Throughout the year, and particularly at festive periods, master chocolate makers devote their expertise and artistry to satisfying gourmet chocolate fans - all of which constitutes a delicious chocolate itinerary to follow in Paris. And, to learn all about chocolate, Paris's chocolate museum Choco-Story retraces the history of cocoa and chocolate.

PARIS GASTRONOMY

IN AN ORIGINAL SETTING

The decor of a restaurant can be just as important as what's on your plate. Here is a selection of restaurants with a difference: surprising, quirky, artistic, sporty or miniature, and places with a view.

> Cultural restaurants

In addition to nourishing the mind, some cultural spaces, museums, film and show venues in Paris also offer the opportunity to have a drink and a cake or lunch or dinner. Public gardens, unusual spaces, historic settings: these places are well worth discovering.

> Gourmet snacks inside shops

When you're in the middle of a frantic shopping spree, it can be a relief to take a break and have a bite to eat. Department stores offer a whole range of choices: snacks, chic tea rooms, wine bars, oyster bars, sushi bars and gastronomic restaurants. At Printemps, Le BHV Marais and Galeries Lafayette Haussmann, customers can also enjoy panoramic views of Paris from the roof terraces.

> Dual-use venues

Some places propose a 'two-in-one' lifestyle experience involving a combination of venue types: a restaurant, bar, dance floor, grocery store, tea room or bookshop. A coffee shop doubling as a bicycle store, a fine food store with tables for communal dining: there are all kinds of combinations - and styles of decor - in these trendy new places.

> Wine bars and eat-in wine shops

Paris is the capital city with the largest number of wine bars, often owned by genuine wine aficionados with a passion for their trade who will unhesitatingly recommend what they consider to be the finest vintages. They spend much of their time travelling to vineyards around the country to meet both renowned and little-known winemakers. Natural wines are much in vogue at numerous wine bars, and some have a selection entirely made up of natural, organic and biodynamic wines. Why not seize this opportunity to step away from your usual choices and try something different?

> Breweries and beer cellars

Microbreweries are cropping up all over Paris. The city's craft breweries and specialist shops offer every imaginable style of beer: unfiltered, unpasteurized, brewed with quinoa, gluten free, triple fermented and coffee beers.

> The cocktail craze continues!

Mixology is enjoying a fresh wave of popularity in trendy Paris bars. Barmen trained at top hotels abroad excel in the art of concocting rum, vodka and tequila-based cocktails; making fruit purées, and sourcing rare spirits. A dizzying variety of cocktails can be found on drinks menus in Parisian bars, with a different line-up of concoctions every season.

> The best baguette in Paris

The baguette is a staple of French gastronomy: no Parisian table would be complete without it. So much so that an award is given out each year to the artisan baker who makes the best baguette. In 2017, Sami Bouattour of Boulangerie Brun was named the best baguette maker in Paris, following on from Mickaël Reydillet and Florian Charles from La Parisienne bakery (9th arrondissement) the previous year. Foodies can go along to taste the quintessential Parisian loaf as made by Sami Bouattour and relish the fact that they're eating the same baguette as the French President: the winner supplies the Elysée Palace for a year.

> Amazing bakeries

Everyone in Paris has their own ideas when it comes to recommending the crustiest baguette or the flakiest croissant. Parisians are usually loyal to their local baker. But the skill of the boulangers on the following list, who specialize in a variety of different breads - country loaves, seed bread, organic bread, multigrain bread, gluten-free bread - would be enough to make the most loyal customer switch camps!

> Cooking lessons

What could be more natural than wanting to learn the secrets of top chefs in a city renowned for both haute cuisine and inventive cooking? Many prestigious chefs have their own schools in Paris: Lenôtre, Alain Ducasse, etc., and prestigious schools like Cordon Bleu offer trainee chefs the finest infrastructure and a creative atmosphere in which to learn their trade.

What's more, young chefs are breaking with tradition and offering express training-tasting sessions at lunchtime or aperitif time - ideal for working people and visitors with limited time to spare.

> Gourmet walks

An enjoyable and offbeat way to explore Paris! Several companies offer guided gastronomic walking tours, as well as chocolate and food market tours with Parisians or chefs, and visits to artisan bakeries or pâtisseries. These delicious walks explore an integral part of Parisian culture - food - while offering many opportunities to indulge in tasting sessions.

Along the water

No Paris trip is complete without a lunch or dinner cruise on the Seine, admiring the city's most beautiful monuments as you glide past them. The meals served at the floating restaurants of the Marina de Paris are prepared from market-fresh produce. The Bateaux Parisiens boats offer a stunning view from their glass-fronted restaurant. Another option is the famous Bateaux Mouche®.
